Creative Passionate Innovative Dedicated Determined Persistent Idealistic Engaged

What moves people to act on their convictions with unconventional creativity?

What has come from out-of-the-box ideas to build community and advance an ideal or vision?

How can we translate concerns into action without funding or existing models?

Where does creativity spring from and how can we access ours and apply it toward our convictions?

“Creativism” meets individuals and groups that initiated an activity in their communities around a need or through their convictions in creative and unconventional ways with little or no funding and powerful impact. These are the people who saw a need and filled it, in many cases without previous experience or clarity of outcome. They looked in and reached out to build community, create beauty, fill a need, draw attention to issues, make waves, open hearts and minds, and attract others to their visions and missions.

These do not necessarily begin or end as huge in scope. These are creative actions that others might imagine them selves doing without prior experience. Americans are among the most creative populations in the world. We have that can do attitude that move ideas into action that create results. When we get a good idea and have our values and community as a foundation, there is an unlimited capacity to create wildly effective changes that touch our lives and the lives of others.

Who are these people? How did they come to their own unique brand of creative activism, and what is it that caught the imaginations of others? Creativism will introduce some of these extraordinary people so we come to understand the whys, hows and whats of their vision and get inspired to carry their ideas forward or come up with our own.

It doesn't need a lot of money to begin.

It doesn't need to be big and grandiose.

It doesn't need all your time.

It does require Creativism.

What out of the box creative, underfunded, AND effective actions across the political spectrum are being accomplished by ordinary people that can be replicated elsewhere?

What might YOU DO about anything at all going on right around you that could use some creativism?
